

Deck or Balcony Collapse Accident Lawyer

 californiainjuryaccidentlawyer.com/deck-balcony-collapse-accident-lawyer/

Deck or balcony collapses can occur due to improper installation, the use of faulty or low-quality materials or an underlying problem, such as dry rot. When one of these structures collapses, a wide range of injuries can occur, including fractures, torn ligaments, and head injuries. While some of these injuries might only be mild, others can end up being life-threatening or even fatal. Those who have had personal injuries from a deck or balcony collapse must handle several matters, such as seeking medical care, paying medical bills, talking to insurance companies and arranging repairs.

If you have personal injuries from this type of accident, the most important thing for you to do is make sure you get proper medical care. Our personal injury lawyers in California can assist you in finding a healthcare provider whether or not you have health coverage. Our lawyers will also provide you with legal help in pursuing monetary or nonmonetary compensation for your injuries.

Call Johnson Attorneys Group at 1-800-208-3538 for a free deck or balcony collapse case review. We do not charge legal fees unless we win or settle your case in your favor.

California Deck or Balcony Collapse Laws

When a deck or balcony collapses, the owner of the building can be held liable. California property owners are expected to ensure that these structures are safe at all times in order to lower the risk of collapses that could injure others. In some cases, building owners do not account for the weight load that the deck or balcony can safely handle. When there is too much weight on these structures, they can collapse. Other possible causes include negligence that occurred when the structure was constructed, such as the use of low-quality materials or improper installation. These structures might also collapse as a result of an improperly constructed connection to the main building.

Types of Available Compensation

Compensation for personal injuries resulting from deck or balcony collapses can include compensation for medical bills, lost wages for missing work during recovery, and compensation for pain and suffering, especially if you have serious injuries or injuries that have left you with a disability. A California personal injury lawyer can provide you with legal guidance in addition to handling other tasks, such as speaking to insurance companies and ensuring that you receive quality medical care. Your attorney can also let you know your rights and handle negotiations for you.

California Personal Injury Lawyers for Deck and Balcony Collapses – Get a Free Case Review

Don't rely on insurance companies when it comes to getting the maximum compensation for your deck or balcony collapse accident. If you or one of your loved ones has been injured due to this type of accident, you need reliable help from a California personal injury attorney. Johnson Attorneys Group does not charge you any legal fees unless we are able to settle your case or win it successfully. To get a complimentary case evaluation, please contact us at 1-800-208-3538.