How a California Auto Accident Lawyer Can Help

A lawyer is not only here to get you the resources you need so you can put your life back in order, they're here to get answers to all of your questions. All automobile manufacturers must follow the Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standards and Regulations in order to legally sell their products. These rules were developed by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to ensure that every driver has the protection they need. Should a manufacturer fail to meet these standards, they could be charged with breach of duty. For example, if the steering wheel failed to control the vehicle or your accelerator became stuck, it may be a sign that the manufacturer had a design flaw or that there was a problem during manufacturing.

In order to have a successful auto defect claim against an auto manufacturer, you will have to prove that:

- The auto part was defective in some way;
- That the faulty product resulted in the accident and or injuries;
- You suffered a physical, financial or emotional loss as a result of the defect.

A personal injury lawyer is here to prove causation of your injury.
