Lawyer for Human Trafficking Victims in California

Most Californians would find it difficult to imagine that human trafficking is still a concern in the state. "Human trafficking" is an expression behind which a sad reality exists, for example, garment workers forced to work in overcrowded rooms, girls forced into prostitution and many more instances. Unfortunately, most of these victims are hidden from the public eye.

Human Trafficking Definitions Under California Law

In September 2005, California passed its first anti-trafficking law to make human trafficking an offense and help victims in reforming their lives. Today, the California law prohibiting human trafficking can be found at Penal Code 236.1. Under the law, human trafficking is defined as the illegal trade in humans for commercial sexual exploitation or forced labor. Commercial sexual exploitation is defined as receiving anything of value from the forced sexual conduct of another person. In this context, force includes coercion or threats of violence. Violation of one's liberty is placing a substantial restriction on someone's freedom. This means the restriction of liberty must have been accomplished by forceful means.

Human Trafficking Crimes Charged Under California Law

There are several variations of human trafficking felonies charged under the California law. They include;

Sexual trafficking crimes: Sexual trafficking is the act of coercing or transporting an individual for a commercial sex act. These offenses are most prevalent in brothels, clubs, massage parlors and escort services.

Labor trafficking: This is the act of forcing an individual to work for little or no compensation.

What a Human Trafficking Lawyer in California Can Do for You

Hiring a competent human trafficking lawyer affords you a decent chance to get justice from the legal system. Here's what a human trafficking lawyer at Johnson Attorneys Group in California can do for you;
