While amusement parks are a popular way to spend summer vacations and enjoy some fun in the California sun, lack of proper regulations by state and federal authorities leave concerns about personal injuries and even deaths at local amusement parks, including at Legoland California.

You might be surprised to learn that there are few laws in place to regulate the safety of the rides amusement parks offer. In addition, the competition is fierce amongst parks to have the latest and greatest rides to draw more attention and attract customers. Unfortunately, this serious situation has seen an increase of amusement park injuries and deaths over the recent years. These high-speed rides can cause head and brain injuries, broken bones, strokes, heart attacks, and even death from being ejected from high-rise rides. These huge businesses need to be held accountable for the injuries and deaths in their parks due to their negligence.
