Causes Of Six Flags Accidents In Amusement Parks

Roller coaster and ride accidents are the most common types of accidents in amusement parks. These accidents are usually very severe and sometimes cause death at Six Flags. The accidents occur when a ride or a roller coaster malfunctions due to poor maintenance, lack of proper testing, or correct operations of the machines. Additionally, injuries occur because the manufacturer failed to consider the safety of a roller coaster or a ride.

Other types of hazards within the park can cause trip, slip and fall injuries. Falling and slipping accidents occur because a stairway or walkway is unsafe because employees failed to wipe out spills on the restaurant floors. They may also occur because the boarding area for a roller coaster or ride is hazardous.

California Six Flag Accidents Laws

When you get injuries in an amusement park, mostly it is due to negligence by the people responsible for the park. Neglect occurs when a park and its employees fail to take an action that could assure your safety. By failing to ensure your safety, the court could hold the park owners financially liable for your injury.

Negligence in an amusement park may include:

- failure by an operator to fasten you on a roller coaster leading to back injuries
- a driver of a tram or bus hits you due to lack of attention
- failure to inspect and maintain rides and roller coasters may cause breakdowns and injuries.

What Type of Compensation is Available?

If you get an injury at an amusement park due to the park operator's negligence, then California law allows the wounded person to seek compensation. The compensation may include the following:

- Medical treatment– includes hospital bills and other expenses
- Consultation– includes the doctor's fee for an in or outpatient
- Pain and Suffering– includes monetary compensation for the mental and physical anguish due to the accident.
- Lost wages and future earnings– you may be entitled to financial compensation if by any chance you are unable to undertake your daily activity as well as the projected future earnings from the business.
- Punitive damages– a person may be liable to fines and other monetary compensation due to negligence
